A DEAL IN FURS.

The Catch of Nine Schooners Bought—The State of the Market.

Yesterday a sale was made of the seal skins which may be brought into port this fall by a combine of nine schooners. Mr. Maurice J. Davis, agent for Joseph Ulman, is the purchaser. Capt. John G. Cox, representing the combine, is the seller. The price to be paid is eleven dollars each for the skins, pups and all. It is believed by dealers that a fair price has been paid, but if short catches continue, the prices of skins in the London market may rise. A large quantity of skins have been taken by the old Alaska fur company on the Copper Islands, over 64,000 being the catch. The new company have already 42,000, and there have been nearly 20,000 sent from here, making over 100,000. The London markets annual sales are seldom more than 150,000 to 175,000, so that even an average catch from the balance of the fleet will leave no shortage.

The schooners in the combine are the Sapphire, Triumph, E. B. Marvin, Juanita, Ocean Bell, Katrina, C. H. Tupper, Teresa and Minnie.

Attempted Incendiary.

Late last night or early this morning an attempt was made to burn a barn belonging to Mr. Clarke, of Henry street. A big piece of cordwood was placed under the structure and set afire but for some reason did not burn, perhaps the person who attempted to do the mean act did not understand the business. About one foot of the piece of wood was burnt but luckily did no damage. The barn is full of hay and if it had got a good start would have caused a big fire as everything is dry in the neighborhood.

Train Wrecked.

FAIR MOUNT, W. Va., Sept. 4.—A terrible freight wreck occurred on the Baltimore and Ohio, eight miles from here, at 2 o'clock this morning. An eastbound train ran into the rear end of a pick-up train, and the engine and 16 cars were almost totally destroyed. James Cordoll, engineer on the freight, is missing and is believed to be killed. The body of an unknown man has also been found in the wreck. The cars caught fire from the engine and were still burning at noon.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 4.—As Admission Day draws near the interest and enthusiasm in its celebration by the Native Sons of the Golden West and by the pioneers increases, and by the 9th the entire city will have been turned inside out, and will have assumed a new and gay attire. Already in every quarter are to be seen emblems of early days, and from nearly every house on the principal streets hang flags and bunting. At every corner some new device is found bidding welcome to the visiting sons. The immense arch spanning Market street is nearly finished, and arrangements are about complete for the celebration.

An Old Mariner Killed.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 4.—A. C. Taylor, a retired sea captain, 70 years of age, was run over and killed by a runaway horse attached to a coal cart today.

A Hot Bearing.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 3.—A dispatch from Newport, Cal., to the Merchants' Exchange says the steamer Westport had arrived there. Captain Jacobs reports having sighted at 6:30 p.m. yesterday the steamer Columbia, which left here for Portland and Astoria September 2. The steamer was off Bodega, laying to and heading in a different direction. The captain says: "When abreast I bore down to her and asked if there was anything wrong. The captain replied: 'Nothing serious; only a heated journal.' He was then laying to one and one-half hours. No assistance being required, we continued on our course, the Columbia slowly following. At 10 p.m. she dropped anchor again, probably from the same cause. From all appearances she will have a long passage to port. The weather was fine and the sea smooth.

Time Wanted.

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 4.—President Edward Hewins of the Cherokee Strip Live Stock Association, said to-day that strenuous efforts are being made to influence the President to extend the time set for the evacuation of the Cherokee strip by cattlemen to December 1. If the President's order goes into effect by October 1, it will necessitate during the next twenty-seven days of rushing fully a quarter of a million of cattle on the market, which will virtually have the effect of running the price of cattle down a great deal lower than the market has been for years. He says every representative and senator from Kansas has signed a memorial asking for an extention of time, which has been presented to President Harrison. The secretary of agriculture has also interceded.

A Very Foul Pit.

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—About eight o'clock this morning John Dillen, a laborer, went down into a well which he had been engaged to clean out on the property of Kate Dillon, Henderson avenue, West Newburg. After being down a short time and it being noticed he stopped work, Thomas Sheehan climbed down to see what was the matter with Dillon. When nearing the bottom of the well, Sheehan was seen by onlookers to throw up his hands and fall heavily to the bottom. A man named Fleming then volunteered to go down and rescue the two men. He edged his way down, but had only gone a little way when he gave a cry and threw up his hands and fell to the bottom. After some difficulty, and no little danger, ropes with hooks were secured and the dead bodies of the three men were pulled up. All three had been suffocated by foul gases. The well was twenty feet deep.

Fiendish Whitecaps.

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 5.—Whitecaps on Tuesday night so brutally beat and maltreated J. E. Smith, a preacher who lives at Reno, Kansas, that his life is despaired of. When found yesterday morning in the woods where he had been taken and whipped, he was unable to speak or move. Smith is 65 years of age. The only objection the Whitecaps had to him was that he proposed marriage to a widow in the neighborhood.

Mizner Heard From.

WASHINGTON, D. Bismarck's Views on Warfare.

LONDON, Sept. 4.—Receiving a deputation of Kissingen veterans yesterday, while en route to Hamburg, Prince Bismarck said the inventions for making warfare were becoming more and more murderous. No indemnity could compensate for the misery and expense caused by the new methods of warfare, therefore, happily everyone thought well before beginning a war. Doctors Schweningen and Chrysander accompanied Prince Bismarck to Hamburg.

A Silly Marquis.

LONDON, Sept. 3.—The Marquis de Leuville left this city to day on the 11 o'clock morning train for Boulogne, where he arrived this evening and registered at the Hotel Marine. It is reported that the Marquis has gone to fight a duel to-morrow morning. The other fellow is a French correspondent, whom the Marquis undertook to kick, but could not, and which eventuated in a challenge from the Marquis, which was accepted by the correspondent.

McMicking of the 44th took second badge and $150, and Sergeant Watters, 60th Fusileers, third and $100. Mortimer, B.C., got $4 in Snider extra series.

STRUCK AN ICEBERG.

The Narrow Escape of the Steamer Vancouver off the Coast.

MONTREAL, Sept. 3.—The Montreal Royal mail steamer Vancouver, Capt. Lyndall, of the Dominion line, which arrived in port after a terrible experience on the way across the Atlantic, sailed for Liverpool Aug. 21 with nearly 600 passengers. Friday morning a fog set in and the speed had been reduced to dead slow, when all at once, what was thought to be a dense fog bank, was observed about three lengths ahead, but in a moment more it was discovered to be a huge iceberg, extending a great distance on either side of the ship and a collision was inevitable.

The passengers saw the situation and the consternation was indescribable. Chief Engineer Murphy, seeing the threatening calamity, rushed into the engine room and ordered the doors of the water tight compartments closed all through the ship, so that before the ship struck the ice this wise arrangements was accomplished, to the horror of one coal heaver, who was imprisoned, time being considered too precious to allow him an opportunity to escape. The Vancouver struck the high iceberg with a crash that sent a thrill of horror to the bravest heart. Notwithstanding the reduced speed of the vessel the collision was terrific, but an examination showed that no serious damage had been done. Estimates of the iceberg's length vary from one mile to a mile and a half. Capt Tindall says this was one of the largest icebergs he had ever met with.

FROM BEHRING SEA.

SEALERS NOW ARRIVING IN PORT.

Small Catches Reported on Account of Fog and Bad Weather—No Seizures Made by the United States Revenue Cutters—The Latest News from the Sea.

The first detachment of the sealing fleet has arrived from Behring Sea. Last night the schooners Triumph and Mary Taylor entered harbor, while the schooner Sapphire had anchored outside, there being no wind. Capt. Cox came ashore, however, in the night. This morning speculation was rife as to why the sealers had put in so early. It was thought that as there had been no seizures made that the fleet would stay out as late as possible. But people who live in Victoria, enjoying the beautiful weather, know nothing of the discomforts and dangers of a sealer's life. Up in the Behring Sea, where the cold breath from the great ice fields becomes condensed into fog, and where raging winds and sleety rains sweep frequently over the sea, it is different than here, and about the end of August the short summer is ended. The Indians who ship as seal hunters know this, and refuse to stay later than the 15th of August within the limits of the sea. The following abstracts of each schooner's trip so far reported, will show some of the difficulties of sealing.

TRIUMPH.

The Triumph, Capt. Clarence Cox, belonging to E. B. Marvin & Co., was the first vessel to enter. Her catch for Behring sea is only 476 seals. The coast catch was 1018, and the southern catch about 300. Capt. Cox reports very bad and foggy weather, making it almost impossible to put out boats. For days it would blow heavily and when a calm day came it would be so foggy that nothing could be seen. Becoming convinced that nothing could be gained by remaining any longer there, sail was made for port, the sea being left on the 22nd of August. No meeting with the revenue cutters was had. All hands aboard are well, and no sickness has been had.

SAPPHIRE.

The sealer Sapphire, Capt. Wm. Cox, also belonging to E. B. Marvin & Co., was the next to report. Although the vessel herself did not come in until this afternoon, Capt. Cox came ashore in a boat after casting anchor near Albert Head. He has the same report of fogs, if possible experiencing even dirtier weather than the others, as from the 10th of July to the 3rd of August it was so thick with fog, that no boats could be put out. The Sapphire carries an Indian crew of hunters, and according to the agreement with them, the sea has to be left by the 15th of August. This is the reason of her early return.

MARY TAYLOR.

The schooner Mary Taylor, Capt. Wm. Petit, owned by Carne & Munsie, also entered port last night and came alongside Rithet's wharf. She has 600 seal skins, all of good quality. Her hunters are Indians, and she left the sea on the 18th of August. Rough and foggy weather, with a great deal of rain, is reported.

NOTES.

The people from the several schooners state that seal are rather scarce, although when a day of fine weather was had a good catch was made, as many as 200 odd seals being taken by one ship's crew in a day. But of course this don't last, and when for one good day many bad ones are encountered, the profits fade away. Several vessels were spoken at different times but only a very vague and incorrect report of the catches could be obtained. The largest reported does not exceed 600, ranging from that to 150.

The Lily has not been seen by any of the vessels and fears of her safety are entertained.

The Black Diamond with 900 skins, came through Two Mountain Pass about the 23rd of August bound for home.

The Ollie J. Olgar was at Shumaghi Isles on the 22nd taking her coast catch out of cache.

The Henry Dennis and the White of Seattle, were spoken about 10th Aug., with 300 odd each.

No accidents are reported. Some of the hunters have been lost from their vessels in the fog for a time, but were picked up later on.

The coining machinery of the old British Columbia mint, says the Westminster Columbian, was damaged beyond repair on Tuesday. The heavy bed of stone on which it rested had been partially undermined by the workmen in excavating for the new foundation, and when no one was looking for such an accident, the whole mass of masonry and machinery tumbled over with a crash, smashing the iron work and frames into many pieces. The machinery is now only fit for the scrap iron market, and it will probably soon find its way into the melting pot and thus obliterate the last of the British Columbia mint.

A HOWLING OLD TIME.

Some Lively Young American Bloods Have a Dinner Party.

LONDON, Sept. 2.—A dinner given to an American by an American here this week is the talk of the town. Desiring to give a friend a send off on his departure for New York, this American of the first part hired the entire Continental Hotel from six o'clock Wednesday evening until 12 o'clock Thursday noon and obtained a special permit from the police to keep the establishment open all night. The host was a well known New York business man. The guest of the evening was a still younger New Yorker who has recently made a fortune over here, while the others included ex-senator of the United States, a judge of the Supreme Court, and many prominent citizens of New York and London. The dinner, which was the best the hotel was capable of, lasted from 9 o'clock in the evening until 1 in the morning. At this hour a company of ladies from the leading burlesque theatres were introduced and dancing began. Meanwhile the dinner table was cleared and the supper table was set and at 4 o'clock all sat down to supper. At 5 o'clock it was broad daylight and a score or so of guests were standing on the balcony of the hotel throwing the flower pots at passing cabs. The manager, who occasionally appeared to request a higher degree of silence was as often run out of the room by his collar and that part of his trousers that afforded the best grip, and two policemen which he introduced on the dancing floor suffered a similar fate and lost their helmets. At 6 o'clock the champagne was still flowing and the guests were throwing their glasses out of the window as fast as they were emptied. At 7 the band was fighting with itself and fragments of musical instruments were scattered about the floor. At 8 those of the guests who had not gone to bed at the hotel, where the host had placed all the rooms at their disposal, left in hansoms, and the residents of that neighborhood went to sleep.

CHAPTER XII.

THE LITTLE FORAGE CAP WAS RAISED WITH COURTEOUS GRACE.

There was an unusual scene at the matinee the following morning. When Capt. Ray relieved Capt. Gregg as officer of the day, and the two were visiting the guard house and turning over prisoners, they came upon the last name on the list—Clancy—and Gregg turned to his regimental comrade and said:

"No charges are preferred against Clancy, at least none as yet, Capt. Ray; but his company commander requests that he be held here until he can talk over his case with the colonel."

"What's he in for?" demanded Capt. Ray.

"Getting drunk and raising a row and beating his wife," answered Gregg, whereat there was a titter among the soldiers.

"I never struck a woman in me life, sir," said poor Clancy.

"Silence, Clancy!" ordered the sergeant of the guard.

"No I'm blessed if I believe that part of it, Clancy, drunk or no drunk," said the new officer of the day. "Take charge of him for the present, sergeant." And away they went to the office.

Capt. Rayner was in conversation with the commanding officer as they entered, and the colonel was saying:

"It is not the proper way to handle the case, captain. If he has been guilty of drunkenness and disorderly conduct he should be brought to trial at once."

"I admit that, sir; but the case is peculiar. It was Mrs. Clancy that made all the noise. I feel sure that after he is perfectly sober I can give him such a talking to as will put a stop to this trouble."

"Very well, sir. I am willing to let company commanders experiment at least once or twice on their theories, so you can try the scheme; but we of—th have had some years experience with the Clancy's, and were not a little amused when they turned up again in our midst as accredited members of your company."

"Then, as I understand you, colonel, Clancy is not to be brought to trial for this affair," suddenly asked the post surgeon.

Everybody looked in surprise. "Pills" was the last man, ordinarily, to take a hand in the "shop talk" at the morning meetings.

"No doctor. His captain thinks it unnecessary to prefer charges."

"So do I, sir; and, as I saw the man both before and after his confinement last night I do not think it necessary to confine him."

"The officer of the day says there was great disorder," said the colonel, in surprise.

"Aye, sir, so there was; and the thing reminds me of the stories they used to tell on the New York police. It looked to me as though all the row was raised by Mrs. Clancy, as Capt. Rayner says; but the man was arrested. That being the case, I would ask the captain for what specific offense he ordered Clancy to the guard house."

Rayner again was pale as death. He glared at the doctor in amaze and incredulity, while all the officers noted his agitation and were silent in surprise. It was the colonel that came to the rescue.

"Capt. Rayner had abundant reason, doctor. It was after taps, though only just after, and, whether causing the trouble or not, the man is the responsible party, not the woman. The captain was right in causing his arrest."

Rayner looked up gratefully.

"I submit to your decision, sir," said the surgeon, "and I apologize for anything I may have asked that was beyond my province. Now I wish to ask a question for my own guidance."

"Go on, doctor."

"In case an enlisted man of this command desire to see an officer of his company—or any other officer, for that matter—is it a violation of any military regulation for him to go to his quarters for that purpose?"

Again was Rayner fearfully white and aged looking. His lips moved as though he would interrupt; but discipline prevailed.

"No, doctor, and yet we have certain customs of service to prevent the men going at all manner of hours and on frivolous errands. A soldier asks his first sergeant's permission first, and if denied by him, and he have what he considers good reason, he can report the whole case."

"But suppose a man is not on company duty, must he hunt up his first sergeant and ask permission to go and see some officer with whom he has business?"

"Well, hardly, in that case."

"That's all, sir." And the doctor subsided.

Among all the officers, as the meeting adjourned, the question was, "What do you suppose 'Pills' was driving at?"

There were two or three who knew. Capt. Rayner went first to his quarters, where he had a few moments' hurried consultation with his wife; then they left the house together; he to have a low toned and very stern talk to rather than with the abashed Clancy, who listened, cap in hand and with hanging head; she to visit the sick child of Mrs Flanigan of Company K, whose quarters adjoined those to which the Clancys had recently been assigned. When that Hiberian culprit returned to his roof tree, released from durance vile, he was surprised to receive a kindly and sympathetic welcome from his captain's wife, who with her own hand had mixed him some comforting drink and was planning with Mrs. Clancy for their greater comfort. "If Clancy will only promise to quit entirely!" interjected the partner of his joys and sorrows.

Later that day, when the doctor had a little talk with Clancy, the ex-dragoon declared he was going to reform for all he was worth. He was only a distress to everybody when he drank.

"All right, Clancy. And when you are perfectly yourself, you can come and see Lieut. Hayne as soon as you like."

"Loot'nant Hayne is it sir? Shure I'd be beggin' his pardon for the vexation I gave him last night."

"But you have something you wanted to speak with him about. You said so last night, Clancy," said the doctor, looking him squarely in the eye.

"Shure I was dhrunk, sir. I didn't mane it," he answered; but he shrank and cowered.

The doctor turned and left him.

"If it's only when he's drunk that conscience pricks him and the truth will out, then we must have him drunk again," quoth this unprincipled practitioner.

That same afternoon Miss Travers found that a headache was the result of confinement to an atmosphere somewhat heavily charged with electricity. Mrs. Rayner seemed to bristle every time she approached her sister. Possibly it was the heart, more than the head, that ached, but in either case she needed relief from the exposed position she had occupied ever since Kate's return from the Clancy's in the morning. She had been too long under fire, and was wearied. Even the cheery visits of the garrison gallants had proved of little avail, for Mrs. Rayner was in very ill temper, and made snappish remarks to them which two of them resented and speedily took themselves off. Later Miss Travers went to her room and wrote a letter, and then the sunset gun shook the window, and twilight settled down upon the still frozen earth. She bathed her heated forehead and flushed cheeks, threw a warm cloak over her shoulders, and came slowly down the stairs. Mrs. Rayner met her at the parlor door.

"Kate, I am going for a walk and shall stop and see Mrs. Waldron."

"Quite an unnecessary piece of information. I saw him as well as you. He has just gone there."

Miss Travers flushed hot with indignation.

"I have seen no one; and if you mean that Mr. Hayne has gone to Maj. Waldron's, I shall not."

"No; I'd meet him on the walk; it would only be a trifle more public."

"You have no right to accuse me of the faintest expectation of meeting him anywhere. I repeat, I had not thought of such a thing."

"You might just as well do it. You cannot make your antagonism to my husband much more pointed than you have already. And as for meeting Mr. Hayne, the only advice I presume to give now is that for your own sake you keep your blushes under better control than you did the last time you met—that I know of." And, with this triumphant insult as a parting shot, Mrs. Rayner wheeled and marched off through the parlor.

What was the girl to do? Nellie Travers was not of the crying kind, and was denied a vast amount of comfort in consequence. She stood a few moments quivering under the lash of injustice and insult to which she had been subjected. She longed for a breath of pure fresh air; but there would be no enjoyment even in that now. She needed sympathy and help if ever a girl did, but where was she to find it? The women who most attracted her and who would have warmly welcomed her at any time—the women whom she would eagerly have gone to in her trouble—were practically denied to her. Mrs. Rayner in her quarrel had declared war against the cavalry, and Mrs. Stannard and Mrs. Ray, who had shown a disposition to welcome Nellie warmly, were no longer callers at the house. Mrs. Waldron, who was kind and motherly to the girl and loved to have her with her, was so embarrassed by Mrs. Rayner's determined snubs that she hardly knew how to treat the matter. She would no longer visit Mrs. Rayner informally, as had been her custom, yet she wanted the girl to come to her.

If she went, Miss Travers well knew that on her return to the house she would be received by a volley of sarcasms about her preference for the society of people who were the avowed enemies of her benefactors. If she remained in the house, it was to become in person the target for her sister's undeserved sneers and censure. The situation was becoming simply unbearable. Twice she began and twice she tore to fragments the letter for which Mr. Van Antwerp was daily imploring, and this evening she once more turned and slowly sought her room, threw off her wraps, and took up her writing desk. It was not yet dark. There was still light enough to see the garrison life stirring close to the windows. Every nerve was tingling with the sense of wrong and ignominy; every throb of her heart but intensified the longing for relief from the thraldom of her position. She saw only one path to lead her from such crushing dependence. There was his last letter, received only that day, urging, imploring her to leave Warrener forthwith. Mrs. Rayner had declared to him her readiness to bring her east provided she would fix an early date for the wedding. Was it not a future many a girl might envy? Was he not tender, faithful, patient, devoted as man could be? Had he not social position and competence? Was he not high bred, courteous, refined, a gentleman in all his acts and words? Why could she not love him and be content?

There on the desk lay a little scrap of note paper; there lay her pen; a dozen words only were necessary. One moment she gazed longingly, wistfully, at the far away, darkening heights of the Rockies, watching the last rose tinted gleams on the snowy peaks; then with sudden impulse she seized her pen and drew the portfolio to the window seat. As she did so, a soldierly figure came briskly down the walk; a pale, clear cut face glanced up at her casement; a quick light of recognition and pleasure flashed in his eyes; the little forage cap was raised with courteous grace, though the step never slackened, and Miss Travers felt that her cheek, too, was flushing again, as Mr. Hayne strode rapidly by. She stood there another moment, and then—it had grown too dark to write.

When Mrs. Rayner, after calling twice from the bottom of the stairs, finally went up into her room and impatiently pushed open the door, all was darkness except the glimmer from the hearth:

"Nellie, where are you?"

"Here," answered Miss Travers, starting up from the sofa. "I think I must have been asleep."

"Your head is hot as fire," said her sister, laying her firm white hand upon the burning forehead. "I suppose you are going to be downright ill, by way of diversion. Just understand one thing, Nellie, that doctor does not come into my house."

"What doctor?—not that I want one," asked Miss Travers, wearily.

"Dr. Pease, the post surgeon, I mean. Of course you have heard how he is mixing himself in my husband's affairs and making trouble with various people."

"I have heard nothing, Kate."

"I don't wonder your friends are ashamed to tell you. Things have come to a pretty pass, when officers are going around holding private meetings with enlisted men!"

"I hardly know the doctor at all, Kate and can't imagine what affairs of your husband's he can interfere with."

"It was he that put up Clancy to making the disturbance at Hayne's last night and getting into the guard house, and tried to prove that he had a right to go there and that the captain had no right to arrest him."

"Was Clancy trying to see Mr. Hayne?" asked Miss Travers, quickly.

"How should I know?" said her sister, pettishly. "He was drunk, and probably didn't know what he was doing."

"And Capt. Rayner arrested him for—for trying to see Mr. Hayne?"

"Capt. Rayner arrested him for being drunk and creating a disturbance, as it was his duty to arrest any soldier under such circumstances," replied her sister, with majestic wrath, "and I will not tolerate it that you should criticise his conduct."

"I have made no criticism, Kate. I have simply made inquiry; but I have learned what no one else could have made me believe."

"Nellie Travers, be careful what you say, or what you insinuate. What do you mean?"

"I mean, Kate, that it is my belief that there is something at the bottom of those stories of Clancy's strange talk when in the hospital. I believe he thinks he knows something that would turn all suspicion from Mr. Hayne to a totally different man. I believe that, for reasons which I cannot fathom, you are determined Mr. Hayne shall not see him or hear of it. It was you that sent Capt. Rayner over there last night. Mrs. Clancy came here at tattoo, and, from the time she left, you were at the front door or window. You were the first to hear cries and came running in to tell the captain to go at once. Kate, why did you stand there listening from the time she left the kitchen unless you expected to hear just what happened over there behind the company barracks?"

Mrs. Rayner would give no answer. Anger, rage, retaliation, all in turn were pictured in her furious face, but died away before the calm and unconquerable gaze in her sister's eyes. For the first time in her life Kate Rayner realized that her "baby Nell" had the stronger will of the two. For one instant she contemplated vengeance. A torrent of invective leaped readily to her lips. "Outrage," "ingrate," "insult," were the first three distinguishable epithets applied to her sister or her sisters words; then, "See if Mr. Van Antwerp will tolerate such conduct. I'll write this very day," was the impotent thought that followed; and finally, utterly defeated, thoroughly convinced that she was powerless against her sister's reckless love of "fair play at any price," she felt that her wrath was giving way to dismay, and turned and fled, lest Nellie should see the flag of surrender on her paling cheeks.

THE MAN COUNTESS.

EXTRAORDINARY FREAKS OF A HUNGARIAN COUNTESS.

Assumes Male Attire and Becomes the Fastest of the Fast Circles of Vienna—Marries an Heiress and Dissipates Half a Million—Nemesis Overtakes Her.

The young Hungarian countess, Sarolta Vay, closed her mad career last January. Without money and without credit, shattered by dissipation and ruined at every turn by the inexorable hand of the law, and notorious beyond any other European woman of her generation, she then took refuge from the sporting world in the seclusion of a friend's house in Pesth. She abjured drinking, betting, and gambling, fighting, duelling, and debt making. She continued to wear trousers and cutaways, but ceased to woo and win young women under such false pretenses. Her retirement from the sporting world, which she had helped to lead, caused the revival of many reminiscences of her bizarre record in the high life of Vienna, Pesth and Prague. But the countess and her family and friends kept their mouths shut so tight concerning her carousals that only desultory bits of her history could be picked up here and there by the continental dailies.

Recently, however, Prof. Von Krafft-Ebing got at the records of the Vay family, from the tenth century founder down to Countess Sarolta, and collected from them the facts for a psychological and physiological study which he has just published. His book is far from being as heavy and abstract as its title might indicate. It contains a wealth of raw material for simon-pure gossip in the finer drawing rooms of Emperor Franz Joseph's subjects.

Countess Sarolta Vay was born in 1866, just nine years after her mother's marriage. Her father was Count Ladislas Vay, a general and an imperial chamberlain. He had waited so long and with so great anxiety for the birth of an heir that when Sarolta came her mother feared to tell him that his first born was only a girl. With the aid of the nurse she concealed from him the sex of the child, and, as time passed, took all the necessary precautions that occasion demanded to keep up the deception. Sarolta went into knickerbockers and round-abouts at the age of five, played boys' games, got the elements of a boy's education, and when twelve years of age could hunt, fish and fence as could few boys of her age. In her fourteenth year he father decided to send her to a military school. To prevent this her mother was obliged to confess all. The count swallowed his anger and chagrin and tried at once to repair the topsy turvy condition of his family affairs by putting Sarolta into girl's clothes, calling her Sandor, and sending her off to a girl's school. In vain, Sarolta refused to be transformed. She stole into her trousers and jackets whenever she got a chance and led her parents a sad life in her constant endeavors to get rid of the petticoats they tried to keep on her. She besought her father to allow her to enter the Honved Hussar regiment. His refusal was the last straw and she proclaimed her intention to tear up Austria with pranks as soon as she became of age.

She kept her word faithfully. On the last day of her majority she swung out into the world in a cutaway, tight trousers, and a high hat, and began a career of unprecedented dissipation. She did everything, and did it with a zest that made her the most notorious person in the fastest circle of Vienna. She got head over heels in debt, and to extricate herself forged, embezzled and stole on a grand scale. Still her creditors were only half satisfied and hounded her constantly. They finally drove her to a step that caused her arrest on a dozen different charges, and her retirement. To extricate herself she married Marie Engelhardt, a beautiful eighteen-year-old girl whom she met at a summer hotel at Worthersee last fall. Papa Englehardt, an army contractor, thought, of course, that his daughter was marrying a real Count Sandor Vay, and was so delighted to have her capture a title that he gave her a dowry of $500,000. The marriage was celebrated with tremendous pomp, such as only a simple continential citizen who has carrolled a nobleman for his daughter knows how to exhibit with proper impressiveness. The countess and Marie went on a wedding journey. The countess threw away the dowry so rapidly that everyone she owed heard of her showy extravagance; her creditors surrounded her, the victims of her dishonesty began to call for indemnification for their losses and a general exposure followed. Despite all this Marie clung fast to the countess, and left her only when compelled to do so by her parents.

Sarolta, or Sandor, was imprisoned in Klagenfurth; was deprived of the right to contract legal debts, and was threatened with the insane asylum. She was released after two weeks of incarceration, and sought directly the quiet of the house of her friend, Fraulein Czeky, in Pesth.

The idiosyncracies of the Countess Sarolta, which are back of all these curious features in her career, are ascertained by Prof. Krafft-Ebing to heredity. A sister of her grandmother, he has discovered, was hysterical somnambulistic, and lay seventeen years in bed, merely because she imagined that she had hip disease. Another grandaunt passed seven years in bed because she imagined herself to be suffering from an incurable disease. Her grandmother suffered from the delusion that a certain table in her drawing-room was cursed. Whenever a person laid an article on this table she cried: "It is cursed, it is cursed," and hurried with the article into an adjoining room, which she called the "black chamber." The key to this chamber she carried in her girdle in the day time, and at night kept it under her pillow. After her death a dozen shawls, ornaments, bank notes and gold pieces were found in this black room. A fourth grandaunt did not allow her servants to sweep or dust her room for four years, and neither washed herself nor combed her hair. All these women were, however, well educated and amiable. Sarolta's mother was nervous, and fell ill whenever she was outdoors in the moonlight. One branch of the mother's family was given over entirely to spiritualism. Four cousins on the mother's side shot themselves.

The majority of the members of the Vay family have been persons of unusual talents. Sarolta's father occupied for a long time posts under the Austrian government, and was a military man of considerable genius, and was a favorite of the Viennese court. He lost his high position, however, on account of his growing eccentricity of behavior and his inclination to throw away all money that came to his hands. In three years he squandered a million, and then fell out of public life.

Sarolta's aunt on the Vay side, who lives in Dresden, partakes of the common eccentricity of the family. While Sarolta, in her thirteenth year, was at her grandmother's house she was engaged in her masculine disguise to make love to an English girl of sixteen, and finally to elope with her, although the grandmother knew from the first of the deception.

The desire of Sarolta to appear to be a man had always amounted to a partial mental derangement. Prof. Krafft-Ebing says she fought six duels, during the maddest part of her career, with Viennese officers and students who reproached her with her sex. She insulted several more, who discreetly declined to challenge the prowess of her arm. She had been "married" by priests and civil officers to no fewer than nine women beside Marie Englehardt. All of these women have seemed to catch the contagion of their own hallucination. Six of them still live in Vienna as divorced Countesses Vay. Two have tried to bring suits for alimony, and one is trying to get Sarolta back to live with her. Sarolta, however, still tries, she says, to remain faithful to her last wife. "Beautiful Marie," she exclaimed recently, "I dream of you every night," "I hate everything that reminds me of my womanhood," she said to a friend of the professor's. "I would formally insult a man who called me a countess. A friend who reminded me of my sex I would never speak to again."

Nevertheless the Countess Sarolta has small affection for mankind. "I have never felt the slightest inclination to become well acquainted with any young man," she exclaimed. "As the years pass by I become more and more convinced that none of them is worthy of my friendship. When I do associate with men, especially in the society of women, I prefer those of a plain exterior, because then I run no risk of being cast in the shade. The idea that a woman could prefer any other man to me has always caused me the deepest pangs of jealousy. In selecting my companions among women I have always chosen the intelligent rather than the beautiful. I have an inexpressible detestation of women's clothes, and in general against everything feminine, so far as it concerns me alone. On the other hand, where others are concerned, I love only those of the gentler sex."

Prof. Krafft-Ebing has also drawn some conclusions from the formation of the Countess Sarolta's handwriting. "The strokes" he says, "show firmness and certainty. They are thoroughly masculine. A close analysis reveals these characteristics. Wild passion, hatred and opposition against everything which partakes of the nature of heartfelt love, an entire lack of poetic sentiment of the sentimental sort, nobility of aspirations, enthusiasm for everything beautiful and noble, a keen mind for science and fine arts. The contents of her manuscripts betray wide reading in the classics of all languages. She quotes freely from the poets, historians and ethical writers of all countries. Her poetical and other literary works are far above mediocrity. For several years she has contributed numerous articles of high merit to four Viennese magazines of wide circulation and considerable prominence."

The Countess Sarolta Vay is a woman of imposing presence. She is of medium height, and has limbs of masculine development. Her shoulders are heavy, her chest is broad. Her hair is short, curly, and almost black. Her nose turns up slightly, and her mouth has the curves of Cupid bow. Although her years of dissipation have cut deep lines in her face, she is still handsome, and looks like a boy of twenty-one.

Pure Lime Fruit Juice.

What is lime juice? This question is rendered necessary by the prominent attention Lime Juice is attracting as the best temperance beverage. The answer is that it should be the juice of the lime fruit without admixture. By the "Montserrat" Company alone is the lime fruit cultivated for this purpose, and great care should be taken to obtain this brand as supplied to the British Government, in lieu of the numerous concoctions sold under the name of Lime Juice Cordials, Prepared Lime Juice, etc.

EXTENSION OF CITY LIMITS.

In respect to the extension of the city limits, it should appear that it is a consummation which ought not to be longer deferred. The suburbs of Victoria have obtained a coherence of aspect but little less pronounced than the city proper, and unless specific reasons can be educed, showing that the advantages of annexation will not be commensurate with the civic burdens consequent thereto the step should be postponed no longer than is required by the formalities of the law. We cannot conceive of any valid objections the suburbs may have to annexation. Municipal taxes are nominal. Victoria's assets more than cover her liabilities, and, including the construction of sewers, there are no conditions of expense which need excite the apprehensions of the most rigid economist. But apart from reasons which we might educe as showing that the extension of the city limits are inseparable from municipal homogeuity, and that the advantages to be derived would more than balance any conditions of civic taxation likely to transpire, we have a Municipality Act whose workability in some respects is yet to be ascertained. Now, this fall, is the time to test two clauses in this act. If these are workable now they will work in the future; if they are not workable now they are not workable in the future. It is desirable, therefore, that we should have a test case so that if an amendment is necessary the House may proceed when next it meets to find one to meet the exigences of the case. We refer to section 10, sub-section A. Under this clause the power to incorporate is vested in the owners of the majority in number of registered town lots. Turning to section 17, we find that the limits of an incorporated city cannot be extended, "unless the consent of a majority of the persons within the boundaries of the proposed extension affected thereby, and who are entitled to petition for incorporation as a municipality under this act, has first been obtained at a poll to be held for that purpose." This clause is variously interpreted. Some hold that it should be interpreted conformably with the letter and spirit of sub-section A, section 10. Others hold that it should be interpreted as it reads, viz: That the question of incorporation is vested in the majority of persons owning lots, and not in persons owning the greatest number of town lots. All doubts as to the meaning of clause 17 should be cleared away. It is manifest that it was not intended that clauses 10 and 17 should be antagonistic of each other. That they are, however, if not clearly apparent, is sufficiently so to raise a doubt, and where this state of things exist progress is blocked. It may be urged that it is just as well to wait until the House meets, when an amendment will be forthcoming which will make the intent of section 17 plain. But have we positive assurance that such an amendment would be forthcoming? And in fact, is it not desirable that we should have an expression of public opinion in the matter. It is, perhaps, in respect to the ambiguity of clause 17, or perhaps we should say the principle of property qualification existing in the Municipal Act, that the city council hesitates to take up the question of municipal extension, regarding such procedure as so much lost time. We can assure the council, however, that until the principle of property qualification as set forth in the Municipal Act is specifically brought to the attention of the public and a concensus of opinion manifested thereon, we need not expect from the House anything very intelligible or satisfactory. Legislation in this Province has been a series of blunders and of ambiguities. So far as we can see, a consecutively logical train of thought has no place in the intellectual qualifications of our provincial Solons. Let, then, the city council bring up the question of the extension of city limits. Such a course would develop public opinion, and future amendments to the Municipal Act would require to be made consonant thereto.

PROCURE THEIR AFFIDAVITS, "HONEST JOHN."

If the Government—with respect to the University Bill—incurred no responsibility, if their consciences are clear, and above all if they stand exonerated of all blame in the matter by the influential gentlemen who drew up the Bill, why do they not hold their tongues, treat with silent contempt the shallow asseverations of the TIMES and the NEWS? "Not responsible." Hug that delusion to your breast, "Honest JOHN!" Nurse it as the dearest, sweetest and best of political blessings! Cherish it as something you can make available as a buffer when you address your constituents. Deify it as an inestimable auxiliary of defence against an unfeeling, wicked, journalistic rabble. But, "Honest JOHN," you have less to fear from the press than you have from the influential gentlemen you so wantonly duped. Make your peace with these influential gentlemen, "Honest JOHN." Receive assurances from them that they have forgiven you, and that they will not in the sweet by and by electioneer against you, when again you shall ask to be permitted to retain your grip on the flesh pots. It is important, "Honest JOHN," that these men regard you as honest, and we would advise that you obtain their affidavits to that effect. Until these influential gentlemen publicly, over their own signatures, express their unbounded confidence in you the public will be suspicious as to their true sentiments. If you would close the mouth of the press, "Honest JOHN;" if you would stop guffaws on the street, "Honest JOHN," when Government irresponsibility is mentioned in connection with the University Bill, you will, without delay, "Honest JOHN," obtain from the influential gentlemen whom you duped, a certificate of character, and flaunt it to the confusion of your enemies.

INSTITUTIONS VS. OPPORTUNITIES.

Respecting the critics of the "single tax" philosophy, the error that they seem to fall into is, that they make the success in life of some few individuals the criterion of the excellence of existing institutions. Existing institutions, therefore, they hold, should be dealt with as they are, and not as they should be.

The true criterion of the excellence of institutions cannot be based on the success of individuals. Some men are so powerfully constituted, mentally and physically, that they rise superior to the most unfavorable environment. Can we safely hold that the success of JAY GOULD is a signal instance of beneficent, social and industrial conditions? Shall it be said that because success has attended his efforts all men may succeed? If isolated instances of individual success are to be made the criterion of the excellence of institutions, then the institutions of China are good enough, for persistent and well directed effort even in that country has its reward. The critirion of the excellence of institutions must rest on their capabilities for affording the greatest good to the greatest number. In pointing to a successful man do we point to an exemplification of our institutions, or do we point to an exemplification of well directed individual energy, to a man of superior mental capacity, one who had the faculty of making the most of opportunity? Institutions have nothing to do with opportunity. Rather are they the sequence of it. The opportunity offered to establish a republic on this continent. It was seized, and the world was electrified. Conditions are the resultant of opportunities. Opportunity presents itself, and the next step is to produce a condition of things favorable to its full development. Is our electric railway the consequence of our institutions, or is it the consequence of opportunity? Did not the opportunity for an electric railway present itself, and were not our institutions subsequently shaped to admit of its development? Now it so happens that all men are not capable of recognizing opportunity when it occurs, or if they are, it as frequently happens that they have neither the energy nor the executive ability to give it full practical value. Opportunity, therefore, is the handmaid only of the few, and these, insensibly shape institutions. In what direction do these institutions tend? With the employment of each succeeding opportunity and the institutions resultant, what has been the consequence? The consequence is that power has become centralized; wealth has fallen into the hands of the few; opportunities have become minimized, that is to say, the few have become so powerful that the development of opportunity is made contingent on their private interests solely. Take, for instance, the institution of land monopoly. The opportunity to monopolize land having been improved, the opportunity of the lessee to derive the full benefits of his labor is made contingent on the price of rent. The lessee is taxed for the privilege of existing. What should be his opportunity is the opportunity of another. We are not prepared to say that the philosophy of "single tax" will remedy this evil. That, however, in attempting to upset the Georgeian theory individual success should be made the criterion of the excellence of our institutions is absurd. The fact that the masses are not as prosperous as the classes argues something vitally wrong. Individual success simply proves a man to be possessed of extraordinary aptitude for turning opportunity to his personal advantage, conquering his environment, so to speak. Why not have an environment that something less than a genius may conquer?

EDITORIAL NOTES.

General BOOTH, of the Salvation Army, is among the first of the military men to accept smokeless powder. He has issued an edict announcing that no member who smokes shall receive a promotion, and that sergeants, bandsmen, sergeant-majors, secretaries and treasurers must resign office or give up smoking.

The aid the electric light renders to navigation is nowhere better exemplified than on the Suez Canal. Prior to March, 1887, the privilege of using the lights was restricted to vessels carrying the mail. Since then a rapidly increasing number of vessels have submitted to the regulations governing the use of the lights, and last year the number was 2,445. The average time taken in the passage of the canal by these vessels was only 22½ hours, and as the average time of all vessels including these was 25 hours and 50 minutes, the gain in time effected through electric lighting is seen to have been very great indeed.

Now that Lord TENNYSON has completed his eightieth year of life, discussion as to his successor in the laureateship has been revived. He himself has nominated Lord LYTTON for the position, but the Queen is said to favor the Earl of Rosslyn, of whom as a poet little has ever been heard. Lord SALISBURY supports the claims of ALFRED AUSTIN, while the Prince of Wales, curiously enough, is reported as being desirous that the Socialist WILLIAM MORRIS should get the appointment. SWINBURNE is supposed to have ruined whatever prospect he had by his recent poem on the Czar of Russia. It is a long time since an appointment to the office of poet laureate was last made, TENNYSON having held the position since 1850. The first patent was granted in 1630, in the reign of EDWARD IV.

PRACTICAL INSURANCE.

The Novel Scheme of Co-Operation Invented by a Boston Genius.

A form of practical insurance against want is under advisement in this city, in which a large portion of the laboring people should be deeply interested, says the Boston Herald. A working-man is often thrown out of employment and reduced to great distress because he has little or no money laid by, and is unable to provide for his board and lodging while out of employment. It has been suggested that a people's mercantile company might be formed among themselves which would undertake to provide board and lodging with landlords at the rate of $4, $5 or $6 a week, on such terms that, after one month of regular payments, one week's board at half pay might be placed to the credit of the interested party, so that if he were out of work or sick, or otherwise disabled, he might not be brought to discomfort because he could not pay his board. At this rate in six months a man would be entitled to one and a half months' credit for board, and in one year to three months' credit for board, which, at half rates, would only cost him the price of one and a half months' board anywhere.

This plan, if it could be carried out, would be a great relief to hundreds of working people who are suddenly disabled or compelled to be idle. It would be impossible for anybody to fall rapidly in debt to such a company, and only in cases of extreme misfortune would persons be willing to surrender their certain insurance of food and lodging, which would grow larger as the years rolled by. A company of this kind would need to have a responsible backing in order to secure public confidence, but though it has never been attempted, it could easily be conducted on the basis which is common to similar undertakings. Payments would be made to landlords the same as now, and the company, after collecting a twenty per cent. discount every week for a month, could afford to give one week's credit and do business on that basis. The credits would not be transferable except by consent of the company of directors, and would be dealt with by them in the same manner as if they were a life insurance policy. When such a company was established its range of restaurants or lodging and boarding-houses would be such as to meet the wants of all classes of people. This is a system of co-operative effort, but it would be a company that could accumulate capital and increase its resources in proportion to its membership. It would thus be a safe investment for individuals without involving them in any personal responsibility beyond what their regular payments would demand.

This organization is not yet in existence, but it is one of the first practical suggestions for self-help which has sprung out of the movement for Christian socialism in Boston, and when it is properly developed and brought into shape it looks as if it might meet a present and pressing need among people who are not forehanded and are not accustomed to making investments for themselves.

The jury brought in a verdict of "not guilty." The judge said admonishingly to the prisoner: "After this you ought to keep away from bad company." "Yes, your honor. You will not see me again in a hurry."

Patron—"I thought you were a dry goods merchant, and yet you have stacks of books in stock." Merchant—"Those, sir, are bankrupt lots of sermons, and I consider that they come legitimately under the head of dry goods."

MIDDLETON'S ADDRESS.

To the Editor:—General Sir Fred Middleton's parting address to the people of Canada, being now the subject of much discussion and criticism in all circles, I regret to say that his mention of my name among those recommended by him for "Honors or Promotion" in the list therein published, compels me most reluctantly to trespasss upon your kindness by asking you to insert the following statement, which I write with the sole object of placing myself right before the public, and putting an end to the constant source of annoyance to which I have ever since the publication of that document been subjected through receiving congratulations, on the one hand, from those unacquainted with the circumstances, and on the other from enquiries of my friends (who are aware of the position occupied and the services rendered by me to the country in the recent rebellion of 1885) as to the cause of my name having been not only entirely omitted from the list of those recommended for the "C.M.G.," but also placed in the list for brevet promotion below those of several of my junior and subordinate officers, not one of whom had had as much trouble and responsibility in connection with the campaign as myself, in whose district and command the rebellion took place, or, with one exception, had been present at as much of the fighting.

To the former I would reply, once for all, that the recommendation, if ever made, was entirely without my knowledge or consent, and would have been regarded by me as a gross insult, and so resented, had I been aware of it previous to Sir F. Middleton's departure from Canada. Under present circumstances, however, I shall confine myself to the bare statement that it is only in keeping with his invariable treatment of me, ever since March 27, 1885, on which date I handed over the command of the campaign to him at Winnipeg, placing at his disposal an efficient force and organization capable of crushing out the rebellion within a few weeks, had my plans been carried out and its further spread prevented, which subsequently occurred, owing to the protracted action taken by him in the matter.

To the latter I can only say, in explanation, that I attribute his attitude towards me in this matter, as arising from the natural jealousy which, unfortunately for human nature, too frequently prevails in the minds of even great men, especially in their relations with officers occupying positions in the field second only to their own, lest the honors—if any—should be divided in a somewhat fair proportion, and the importance of their own share thereby to a certain extent be lessened.

To my brothers-in-arms, with whom I had the honor of serving throughout the campaign, including the battles of Fish Creek and Batoche, I need say nothing, as all are aware of the truth of my previous statement and can form their own judgment as to the manner in which I performed the arduous duties devolving upon me as Deputy Adjutant-General and second in command of the "Northwest field force" up to the moment I left General Middleton's column at Guardepuis Crossing on the 17th of May, when the campaign was virtually ended, Riel being then a prisoner in our hands and no shot having been subsequently fired by either side. I would also refer them to General Middleton's "Report on the suppression of the Rebellion" where they will find that many services which they know to have been performed by me, were totally ignored, and some very important ones actually credited to others, who had nothing whatever to do with them.

Perhaps these facts were not entirely unknown to Sir John Macdonald and Sir Adolphe Caron, and may to a certain extent account for their reluctance in recommending the honors asked for by General Middleton, as stated in the list published by him.

I trust I may be excused for having trespassed so far on your valuable space, and repeating my assurance that nothing short of the reasons above stated could have induced me to open up these old sores, which I have patiently endured for so many years, and regretting to be obliged to do so now, as even at the risk of being accused of the dastardly action of "kicking a man when he is down."

I feel, however, that the moment has now arrived, owing to the publication of that list, when the vindication of my character as a soldier, and the removal of the stigma cast upon me by Sir F. Middleton, becomes a matter of absolute necessity, and I can only express the hope that my motive in taking this action will not be misconstrued.—Yours truly. C. F. HOUGHTON.

LITTLE INDIAN GIRLS.

How They Pass Their Leisure Hours While Attending School.

One of the teachers in an Indian school sends to the Word Carrier an account of the every-day life of her Indian pupils which the boys and girls will be glad to read:

"Their yard is a good one to play in. It is a very large one, and has two groups of trees that make a nice shade, two or three swings, a teeter-board and a little bridge over a gully worn out by the water. In the spring the ground is covered with flowers. There are violets and dandelions, the purple buffalo-bean, the wild pink prairie rose, daisies, and the children gather and give away many a pretty little bouquet without ever leaving the yard. In one corner they have made a cemetery for various little animals that have died—a kitten, a chicken, a sparrow and two or three more. Behind the wood-pile they have built of old boards two little houses, each large enough to hold several children. The houses have roofs to keep off the sun, and here, with blocks of wood for seats and broken dishes to set their table with, they play at 'keeping house.'

"The children often go to walk when there is an older person to go with them. One day last fall two of us teachers went with about twenty little girls. Some were close beside us, and others were running ahead a little way. Suddenly I discovered that those before us were nowhere to be seen. 'What has become of those children?' I asked. But a few steps forward explained the matter. They had thrown themselves flat upon the ground in some furrows made by running water, and were completely hidden by the side of the furrows and the grass. In a minute they were up again; they only did it for fun to surprise us.

"Wherever they go, they seem to find some plant that has a part they can eat, and they greatly enjoy the berries or roots that they gather. Some of the fruits are really very nice. There are gooseberries, blackberries, grapes and plums in their season. But the children find something to browse upon at any time in the year. Just now the chief delicacy is the 'tipsinna,' or Indian turnip—a little white root, rather sweet and spicy—and the children sometimes go out expressly for the purpose of digging these. They also eat the bulb of the oxalis, rose-hips and sumac-berries, and these last stay on all winter, so that even in January and February they find something they like. One little girl even dug up a tulip-bulb and ate it. It is not because they are hungry, either, but they have always been used to eating these things and they like them.

"They play with dolls in the house, and among the possessions of the twenty-four girls there are dolls of all materials, from wax to rags. Some of the girls have made quite large and good-looking rag dolls; nearly all are capable of making and dressing little ones. They make more than they need for their own use, for they sometimes give their teachers little rag dolls as tokens of their love. They cut and make their dolls' clothes very well, and dress them, as they themselves dress, in true American fashion.

"But sometimes the loving remembrance of their homes will show itself in their play. One day I met half a dozen or more little girls with their dolls upon their backs supported by a shawl, just as the Indian mothers carry their babies; and on another day I saw a little girl carrying in the same way the great good-natured black cat that belongs at the Birds' Nest. Ditto, the cat, seemed perfectly contented. He had one paw on each shoulder, just as a child carried in that way would be likely to place its hands. I think, however, that Ditto is a cat of unusual patience, for I have seen him sleeping flat on his back in a doll's cradle with coverlets tucked down tightly over him."

A WALKING PESTILENCE.

The Person Who Speaks His or Her Mind Always and Everywhere.

The man who speaks his mind always and everywhere little realizes how thankful many of his hearers are that they have not such an uncomfortable, unhappy, malodorous mind clamoring for expression, as is evidenced by the unkind judgments and uncharitable words which are usually on the lips of this frank person. For have you never noticed that this quality is rarely claimed and insisted upon other than apologetically? The Home Magazine says:

"Have you ever met the man who prides himself on the fact that he always says just what he thinks?' You have? Then you will agree with me that he is a good deal of a walking, talking pestilence. There is no truer saying than this, that speech was given to disguise one's thoughts. The refinements of civilized life melt away before the man or the woman who says what he or she thinks. Mortals of that kind do not even observe the good old rule about thinking several times before speaking. No. But, ignoring such a thing as tact, which is the fair offspring of thoughtful speech, they betray the fact that they speak what they have no business to think in a way that makes every one about them dismally uncomfortable and ready to vow that the man who thinks and speaks not is incomparably preferable to the fellow who thinks and speaks simultaneously. Those who work their chins and their brains synchronously, those who blurt out their thoughts, and prids themselves on so doing, may be well-meaning persons, but they are none the less unbearable. They grossly abuse the one gift which lifts them above the plane of animals—the gift of speech—when they 'say just what they think.'"

Following Instructions.

At a hotel a waiter came out of the coffee-room and informed the manager that a man was raising a disturbance because he could not have his accustomed seat at the table. "Go in again," said the manager, "and propitiate him in some way." Back went the waiter, and said: "If you don't like the way things is done here you can get out, or I'll propitiate you pretty quick."

ORIGIN OF BEN HUR.

How General Wallace Came to Write His Now Famous Novel.

Talking with an intimate friend of General Lew Wallace the other day, says a writer in the New York Star, I learned the true inspiration of his famous novel, "Ben Hur." "Wallace was on an Eastern-bound train," said my informant, "and while going through the drawing-room car he passed the open door of a compartment in which sat Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll. 'Come in,' said the latter. 'I'm lonely in here, and want some one to chat with.' Wallace entered, and seated himself. 'All right, Colonel,' he said, 'what shall we chat about?' 'Lots of things,' replied Ingersoll. 'Is there a future life?' Looking out of the window dreamingly, as the express sped on, he answered his own query. 'I don't know—do you? Is there a God? I don't know—do you? Was Christ the son of God? I don't know—do you?' He paused and looked keenly at Wallace. The General was a little embarrassed by the abruptness of the great infidel's interrogatories. He replied: 'Really, Ingersoll, I have never given much thought or study to the questions you propound. I had a Christian training, and I have always tacitly accepted them.' 'Indeed?' said Colonel Ingersoll. 'Why, man, you surprise me! They are vital issues. I have studied the subject thoroughly. Every man ought to. Now, take my advice and look into the matter. You'll find you'll agree with me.' 'I went away from this interview both embarrassed and mortified,' said the General, 'that I did not feel competent to discuss so important a matter with so learned a thinker. I made up my mind that I would never place myself again in so embarrassing a situation. I took down my books, and read every authority I could lay my hands on. After a year's study, so far from agreeing with the great agnostic in his expressed opinions, I wrote 'Ben Hur.' That is my reply to him!'"

FOUND AT LAST.

When it became known, says the San Francisco Chronicle, that Captain Gee had fitted out a Brother Jonathan expedition, the cupidity and curiosity of a hundred old salts was at once awakened.

One day recently an ancient mariner called to see Lorentz Foard, the well known Market street ship chandler. He introduced himself by saying that he was one of the few sailors that survived the wreck of the Brother Jonathan. He said that he felt confident that he could locate [illegible] where the Jonathan sank years ago. The sailor and the opportunity were embraced. He was sent with a diver named George Baker to the scene of the wreck, and arrived there in advance of the Gee party. Long sounding lines were procured and the diver went out to Point St. George in a small boat, from which they operated. Soundings were made for a distance of many miles from the jotted point where the ship met destruction. The sailor's theory was that tide and settlement had dragged the ship away from the rocks, and that she had been carried into deep water.

After several days spent in this weary and monotonous work came a day of discovery and an era of results. While conducting the soundings several miles from Point St. George in 100 fathoms of water, the sensitive hand of the diver felt a delicate strain on the rope. A shout of excitement escaped him and he continued to experiment in the same section. A hard resistence was felt at the line. It had come in connection with a substance foreign to the ocean bottom. Preparations were made at once to descend. The diver fitted himself in his air-tight armor and was lowered through fathoms of water until his swaying feet touched the bottom. He grouped about for a considerable time. Finally he discovered standing up in clear and solitary relief the beam of what was once a ship. The rest of the hull had been destroyed in a long lapse of time or was submerged in mountains of sand. But the testimony was there.

Baker found it impossible to remain under the water long because it was in 100 fathoms. He came to the surface and reported his discovery. It could be no other than the emaciated remnants of the illfated Brother Jonathan, about which so much has been written and said. Baker returned to San Francisco and reported to Lorentz Foard his discovery, adding that he did not think it possible for a diver to raise the vessel. She lies in very deep water and the terrible pressure brought to bear precludes the idea of operating for over a minute on the ocean bed. But from the diver's evidence a mystery of years has been partially cleared—the Brother Jonathan has been found.

The schooner Mary Anderson is expected to arrive at Crescent City in a few days, and the search for the treasure will be redoubled now that some tangible proof of her location has been obtained after the costly efforts of many years.

The Best Disinfectant.

Chloride of lime is the safest, as well as one of the best, of disinfectants. It owes its merit to the free chlorine gas which it contains when fresh and gives off slowly into the air. When used in sufficient quantity in a room or closed space, it combats much of its impurities. As for the germs of disease, this agent is something of an enemy to them, although not a powerful one. It is customary in contagious diseases to lay the chloride of lime about in saucers. Some good is certainly done in that way, but it is measured by the quantity of lime used, which, in order to have a very decided effect, must be considerable. It acts well dissolved with water as a disinfectant of "wash clothing" which has been within the atmosphere of a sick room containing a patient ill with an infectious disease. Some use it in solution, to disinfect water closets and bath pipes; but it is scarcely fit for that purpose, as the chlorine corrodes lead and iron.

The fact should be remembered that in using chloride of lime it must be confined in order to render it efficacious as a disinfectant. We occasionally see it sprinkled about in foul places, such as open drains, on heaps of filth, etc.—places freely exposed to the air. In such situations it is absolutely powerless to do good. It must be in a practically closed space, where the gases arising from it can be confined until they can do their work.

A Free Trip Around the World!

This is the age of travel. The people are all educated and cultivated to such a degree, that in the hearts of almost every one there is a longing to see foreign countries and view the places whereof so much has been written and said. The Home Fascinator Publishing Co., of Montreal, offers a grand opportunity to see the world. To the person sending them the largest number of English words constructed from letters contained in the sentence will be given A Free Trip Around the World. Also in order of merit the following additional prizes will be awarded:

"GOD SAVE THE QUEEN,"

A Free trip to Florida. A Silver Tea Set, $60.

A Domestic Sewing Machine, £60.

Ladies' or Gents' 14k. Gold Watch, $50.

A present will be given to anyone sending a list of not less than twenty-five English words, of not less than four letters, found in Webster's or Worcester's Dictionary, allowable.

Enclose 50 cents to pay for a Grand Premium Catalogue and a six months trial subscription to the beautifully illustrated family story paper "The Home Fascinator."

The person sending in the largest list of correct words may not be in a position, or care to make the extensive trip offered, the publishers give such person the choice of the trip or $1000 in cash.

Address, "THE HOME FASCINATOR," Montreal.

Teaching the Young Idea.—A Kansas school ma'am has introduced a new feature in her school. When one of the girls misses a word the boy who spells it gets permission to kiss her. As a result the girls are becoming very poor spellers, while the boys are improving.

An immense assortment of Kensington Art Squares, all sizes, just received by John Weiler, 51 to 55 Fort street.

At Scalby, near Scarborough, there is a notice which reads "Stick no bills. One pound reward if found out." The question arises, who can claim the reward? Can it be claimed (1) by a person who sticks bills; (2) by a person who sticks no bills; (3) or by the person who finds another person out in the act of not sticking bills? I am inclined to favor the last solution, but I own that it admits of argument. At Ballydown, in County Down, might be seen some time ago the notice: "Any one trespassing on these premises without permission will be prosecuted." The two words which I have seen another notice on a tramway in the adjoining County of Armagh in which punctuation is [illegible] "It is dangerous to walk on this line by order of the directors." On the book ledges of a suburban parish church was displayed a short time since, neatly printed, the following notice: "All kneelers should be hung up at the end of the service."

A Warning.

MR. EDITOR,—It is a well-known fact that the majority of people are inclined to look upon a cold in the head as a matter of little importance—involving at the most only a temporary inconvenience. No more disastrous mistake was ever made. The neglected cold in the head is the source of the catarrhal affections with which about seven-tenths of the people of this country are afflicted, and catarrh itself is too often the preliminary stages to consumption and death. The symptoms of catarrh are manifold, but among them may be mentioned, offensive breath; dull, oppressive headache; offensive droppings from the nostrils into the throat and bronchial tubes; deafness or partial deafness; constant hawking and spitting; weak and watery eyes; a hacking cough and feeling of general debility; ringing in the ears and frequent dizziness. These are but a few of the more general symptoms, and those who experience them should lose no time in applying a remedy. Delays are proverbially dangerous, and in the case of this too prevalent disease may lead to death. We offer Nasal Balm to the public as a positive cure for cold in the head and for catarrh in all its forms and stages. Nasal Balm has been tested in thousands of cases, and the testimonials in our possession prove that it is all we claim for it. It has cured other sufferers, it will cure you. It is easy to use, pleasant and agreeable and does not require a douche, or any torturing instrument to apply it. Give it a trial and be convinced of its great efficacy. Sold by all dealers or sent post free on receipt of price 50c. for small or $1 for large size bottles by addressing Fulford & Co., Brockville, Ont. daw

TO-DAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

At 9 o'clock this morning the second day of the Northwest Baptist Convention was opened with devotional exercises, which were continued until 9:30, when the report of the secretary of Home Missions was read. This was followed by the report of the Mission Board and the Superintendent of Missions. The reports contained a very interesting review of mission work, starting in the Province and proceeding southward, reviewing the needs and immediate demands. The reports showed that sixteen are under appointment with an expenditure of $8,000, and that churches had been organized at the following places during the year: Ballard, Kent, Blaine, Fairhaven, Port Townsend, Hoquaim, Fernhill, Costa, Damon, Southbend, Spring Ridge, Victoria, New Whatcom. The following churches are under process of construction: Ballard, Hoquiam, Seattle (Scandanavian), Blaine, New Whatcom, Lynden, Ferndale and Fernhill. Churches dedicated during the year: Kent, Tacoma, and Vancouver, Wash. The Home Mission board recommended in their report the establishment of churches at Montecino, Aberdeen, Sedro, Port Angeles, Snohomish, Anacortes and Gardener's Landing, and it was determined that $10,000 should be raised for prosecuting the work of home missions.

The reading of the reports was followed by a general discussion on mission in which all the delegates took part and in which the growth of the Northwest, that is, Washington, Oregon and British Columbia, was clearly pointed out.

This afternoon from 2 till 4 o'clock the work of the Women's Mission was taken up after which the educational board reported.

The following is the programme for to-night and to-morrow:

7:30—Mass meeting for consideration of Sunday school and young people's work in our churches.

Cannot be Surpassed

Mr. Jno. T. Pierre, merchant tailor, has received his first shipment of fall and winter goods, comprising elegant English and American coatings, suitings and trousering. On inspection they will be welcomed by lovers of choice cloth as they far surpass any previous importation of woolens into British Columbia, and as Mr. Pierre employs none but the best workmen, his customers may depend on having their garments cut and made in a satisfactory manner.

DOMINION RIFLE MATCHES.

Special to the TIMES.]

OTTAWA, Sept. 5.—The shooting for Governor-General's and other matches had to be postponed until to-day, as the state and civil officers were unable to have the scores finished so as to allow them to proceed. The large crowd that turned out to see the presentation was greatly dissatisfied. The matches close to-night. The weather is excellent for shooting. Newbury got 86 in the Ouimet match yesterday.

THE ROSS BAY ROAD

Still Closed For Traffic—What the Government are Doing.

The Government of the Province of British Columbia is without doubt very neglectful about things that come within their jurisdiction. Some time ago the TIMES mentioned that the Ross Bay road had been closed for over a month. Well, that time has nearly doubled, and still buggies are unable to pass over the road. It is true that there is nothing to prevent them from going on to the road from the Beacon hill side, but when they get about half way through they find that they have to retrace their steps. The obstruction is a ravine which was formerly spanned by a bridge, but which is now open, without any light at night, as an easy trap for a horse and buggy to run into. Another thing they are doing, certainly not with the object of improving matters, is the taking of gravel from the side of the road leading from Beacon hill to Henley's for the purpose of building the new road. Thus they are spoiling one part of the road to improve the other.

It is all very well for the Government to improve the roads around Victoria, and no doubt the people are glad to have it done, but at the same time they might do it properly, and not have a road closed during the months in which it is mostly used.

COUNTY COURT.

[Before Mr. Justice Walkem.]

Marks vs. Doll & Kirschberg.—This was a case in the nature of an action for deceit, to recover $75 from defendants.

The plaintiff's case was that the defendant Kirschberg, who pretended to be the plaintiff's friend, induced and persuaded him to purchase off the defendant Doll, through his agent, $300 worth of watches, rings and other jewelry, and to act upon the representations of Doll's agent, and that he, Kirschberg, would endorse his note to enable him to purchase the goods. The plaintiff afterwards discovered that some of the goods were not of the quality represented by Doll's agent. Mr. Doll arrived in Victoria last month and Marks called on him, and then Doll informed him that $75 had been paid to Kirschberg for bringing about the sale and endorsing the note, and that he had since discharged his agent for his conduct in this and other transactions.

Mr. Pennock and Mr. Davidson gave evidence as to the quality and value of the goods—many of the rings being 8 to 10 karat, whereas they were stamped 14 and 15 karat. The defendant Doll did not appear.

Kirschberg denied that he had persuaded Marks to act on the representations of Doll's agent, in fact had advised him to the contrary. He admitted on cross-examination that before Marks had selected the goods he had arranged with Doll's agent to get 25 per cent. out of the transaction for endorsing the note for Marks.

After counsel had addressed the jury, His Lordship in a very able and concise charge left the case to the jury, who after an absence of about five minutes, brought a verdict against both defendants for $75. Judgment for $75 and costs. Mr. S. Perry Mills for plaintiff, Mr. D. M. Eberts for Kirschberg, Mr. Thornton Fell for Doll.

An Improvement.

W. M. Halliday is now busy compiling for R. T. Williams, publisher of the B. C. Directory, the largest and most complete directory of the Province ever published.

Moss Street Fire.

That grass fire on Moss street is likely to assume serious proportions if something is not done to abate it. It has been burning now for some time and has sank down at least two feet, which endangers the road, as it was built over a swamp in the first place.

What to Wear.

To-day there arrived the first consignment of fall goods for gentleman's clothing. They comprise a well selected stock of Scotch, French, and German goods in the latest patterns, and will be made up at reasonable figures, in a first class manner, by J. McCallum, 43 Fort street.

Equines and Canines.

If you want to laugh as you never laughed before go to see Prof. Gentry's dogs and ponies to-night at Victoria Theatre. There are four of the funniest clown dogs in America, Enrek, the clown pony. There are just fifty animals and they are all star actors going through a performance, thoroughly understanding over one thousand words of command. This entertainment is refined and instructive.

Grand matinee Saturday. Secure reserved seats in advance.

The Venue Changed.

The application for change of venue of the intimidation cases, from Nanaimo to Victoria, was argued and finally disposed of this morning, Mr. Bodwell for Mr. Davie, representing the crown, Mr. Pooley, Q.C., the prosecution and Mr. Campbell the miners. It was argued on behalf of the miners that owing to the newspaper war which is being waged with reference to the strike, that the venue should be changed to Westminster, if changed at all. His Lordship Mr. Justice Drake, held that the newspaper war was general and that he could not see why miners could not not get as fair a trial in Victoria as in New Westminster. The court also held that there was good ground for changing the venue from Nanaimo, nearly the whole jury list there being miners. The venue, therefore, was ordered to be changed to Victoria, and all the additional costs occasioned the defendants on account of witnesses should be paid by the Crown.

Another Applicant.

The Tramway company is also an applicant for the wealth in Goldstream. Secretary Belyea having published the usual notice of an application to the Government for authority to record and divert 1000 inches at or near where the stream crosses the western boundary of section 7. The water is wanted for agricultural, manufacturing and general motive power purposes. Is it not about time that the whole question of individual rights to water courses, or to the exclusive use of water in creeks and rivers was carefully considered by the Government.

Obstructing the Bridge.

Whiskey will make a fool of any man, and true to its word it last evening made a big fool of a man who in the everyday run of life is very particular about what he is seen doing. Slowly but surely this individual steered his person down to James Bay bridge, where he had evidently decided to rest. Grasping a post with one hand he proceeded to sit down on the swinging chain, but "it wasn't there," and the inebriate came down with a thump that would have made an alderman think a hundred teams were running over it. There he lay for hours and hours, according to gentlemen who had occasion to pass the same way several hours afterwards.

The Queen Pays All Expenses.

The Queen's last "Free Trip to Europe" having excited such universal interest, the publishers of that popular magazine offer another and $200 extra for expenses, to the person sending the largest list of English words constructed from letters contained in the words "British North America." Additional prizes, consisting of Silver Tea Sets, China Dinner Sets, Gold Watches, French Music Boxes, Portiere Curtains, Silk Dresses, Mantel Clocks, and many other useful and valuable articles will also be awarded in order of merit. A special prize of a Seal Skin Jacket to the lady, and a handsome Shetland Pony to the girl or boy (delivered free in Canada or United States), sending largest lists. Everyone sending a list of not less than twenty words will receive a present. Send four 3c. stamps for complete rules, illustrated catalogue of prizes, and sample number of the Queen.

THE POSTAL TELEGRAPH

To Improve Their Connections With Victoria at Once.

One of the passengers from San Francisco, on the Umatilla, was Mr. John Leatch, who is assistant superintendent of the Postal Telegraph system. Mr. Leatch will proceed to Port Townsend and personally inspect the line from that place to Dungeness, to ascertain the condition of the wire and poles along the route and to arrange for the stringing of a new wire. The work will be proceeded with at once, and when completed the facilities for telegraphing will be improved considerably. Mr. Leatch is one of the old pioneers of the coast, having come west thirty-five years ago, and in telegraph circles is very widely known.

JOHNSON STREET RAVINE.

An Open Sewer That Runs Through Private Property.

The citizens of Victoria, especially those who have business within a block of the Johnson street ravine have been wondering why the city have discontinued cleaning out that disease encourager. The stink that arises from the ravine next to Brackman & Ker's on Government street and in fact all along the ravine is stifling, but the sanitary officer says that he has received strict orders not to have the place cleaned out. The city used to have it cleaned out, but of late they have not touched it and in places it is stopped up with rubbish of all kinds. What the sanitary committee built the Johnson street sewer for it is hard to say if they do not intend to do away with the ravine. The sewer was built as far up as the corner of Yates and Blanchard streets where the ravine commences but still the sewage flows down through private property much to the annoyance of people who have good olfactory organs.

AROUND THE COURTS.

An Appeal to be Entered Against Justice Drake's Decision.

A notice of appeal has been entered against Mr. Justice Drake's decision in the Douglas children case by Davie & Bodwell, and a further summons has been taken out to extend the time of the notice of appeal.

In the city police court this morning three boys, the oldest of whom is not more than ten years old, were charged with shooting 18 pigeons belonging to R. Merritt. The prosecutor claims that the pigeons are worth $50, which is a pretty exhorbitant price for things that can be bought by the hundreds for 50 cent per pair, which would bring the value of the 18 down to about $4.50. The case, however, was remanded until to-morrow.

In the Supreme Court this morning the case of C. Gibson on appeal came up, and the application for discharge was granted as no one appeared for the prosecution. Pope, who was the prosecutor in the police court refused to prosecute and Gibson was ordered to be discharged.

DEGRADING THE SCHOOLS.

The Government, not content with degrading the trustees of Victoria, is pursuing a course in respect to the Vancouver school which can only end in degrading it to the level of an ungraded country school. In Victoria, John Robson—"Honest" John Robson, so-called Minister of Education—declines to pay an account of $5, incurred by the board for the purpose of exposing the duplicity of a protege of the department, and in Vancouver, Mr. Pope—Dr. Pope as is—advises the teachers to promote the pupils wholesale in order that seating accommodation may be provided in the lower forms for the redundant juvenile population of a city which is somewat famous for its marvellous growth, natural and artificial. It is not surprising to find the "Minister of education," so called, and the Superintendent of Education, conspiring in this way to ruin the schools of the two chief cities of the province for where they cannot rule they are ready to destroy. But like the trustees of Victoria, the Vancouver board do not propose to allow Messrs. Robson, Pope & Co. to run things without making an effort to save their schools. At a meeting of the Board on Tuesday night, the question of appointing a seventh assistant teacher, gave rise to a long discussion, which involved the matter of attendance and the question of promotions. We quote from the World, a Robson organ: "Mr. Robinson, who was present, was asked to state his views of the matter. He said he had with great care, in June last, made promotions in the schools. He had talked with Dr. Pope about the appointment and that gentleman had recommended that say 30 be taken from the lowest department to the next higher and so on, to fill up the seats. This method he had objected to as it would destroy the classification in all the rooms and turn it into an ungraded school. He would not do that so long has he (Robinson) was Principal."

It was moved by C. Whetham, seconded by W. Brown, that

"Whereas, In the opinion of this Board the plan of promotion recommended by the Department of Education to be adopted to the central school would almost completely obstruct the work in such school;

Resolved, That this Board respectfully protest against the decision of the Department of Education in refusing to authorize the appointment of an additional teacher."

The motion was adopted.

It was moved by A. H. B. Macgowan, seconded by G. F. Baldwin, that whereas the East End school building is crowded to such an extent as that attendance at same must prove injurious to teachers and pupils, one room having an actual attendance of 92; Resolved that the Department of Education be requested to grant the Board power to rent a suitable room for temporary purposes and to have a teacher for [illegible].

Moir vs. Urquhart.

A Small Cyclone.

At about 12 o'clock last night those citizens of Victoria who are of a sleepless nature, were startled by the sudden bursting of a storm that for a time almost equalled a Dakota cyclone. The evening had been cool and pleasant, only being disturbed by a few flashes of lightning, until the storm burst over the city, and was gone almost as suddenly as it started.

The World Enriched.

The facilities of the present day for the production of everything that will conduce to the material welfare and comfort of mankind are almost unlimited and when Syrup of Figs was first produced the world was enriched with the only perfect laxative known, as it is the only remedy which is truly pleasing and refreshing to the taste and prompt and effectual to cleanse the system gently in the Spring time or, in fact, at any time and the better it is known the more popular it becomes.

A Heavy Freight.

The C. P. N. steamer R. P. Rithet arriving from the Fraser last night had a very heavy freight. Among it were 1460 cases salmon from the B. A. P. Co., 700 from the Beaver Canning Co., 97 head of cattle for Parker and Porter, five horses and a large quantity of other miscellaneous freight. So large was the cargo that is was impossible to unload and reload rapidly enough for her to leave on schedule time, consequently she did not get away on the return trip until two o'clock this afternoon.

News from the Front.

There is no news from Wellington, says the Free Press, everything being stagnation double distilled and even then condensed. The first shot has been fired by C Battery, judging from the fact that Constable Mainguy brought up a man from Chemainus showing many signs of insanity. He says C Battery is after him to shoot him, and he is always hiding from an imaginary muzzle of a rifle.

The sentry guard has been withdrawn, only eight or ten soldiers remaining in charge of a sergeant. But little can be learned in regard to the fire, beyond the fact that the men are working there, and that large quantities of sand are being sent down the No. 3 shaft.

It is now stated that the fire is working close to the No. 4 mine, and that it will be difficult to prevent it spreading.

Alberni News.

Nanaimo Free Press: Everything around Alberni seems to be progressing very favorably, and the farmers are delighted with the crops this year which have been highly successful.

A grand picnic is to be given to the Sunday school scholars on Saturday next and everything has been arranged to ensure the success of the undertaking. A dance will be given in the evening and a good time is anticipated.

Mr. Frew who is a prominent member of the church and for some time past has been occupying the pulpit will be presented with a handsome gold headed cane previous to his departure for college. The presentation is to be made in recognition for the valuable service this gentleman has rendered to this community.

Mr. Procter, the school teacher, is also to be presented with a very beautiful silver headed cane in honor of the good work done by him in his department. Mr. Procter will also depart for college.

FIRE AT NO. 3 MINE.

Danger of An Explosion Reported—The Flames Said to Be Spreading.

It is reported that the fire in No. 3 Wellington mine is spreading, and that there is great danger of it communicating with No. 4. If it does so explosion is almost inevitable, and as the amount of gas being set free by combustion is considerable, and as the gases have a chance to get to No. 4 mine by the air chambers, it is possible that the explosion may occur. It is to be hoped, however, that the property, which is very valuable, will be saved, and that none of the fears entertained will be realized. The fire was thought at first to be easily controllable, but later developments seem to show that such is not the case, a gentleman just down from Wellington having been spoken to on the matter, expressed himself as of the opinion above given.
